Ballet mistress, of the corps de ballet, composed of college boys, is the unique position Miss Rose Becket fills.Not only does she instruct the students in her art, but the mothers and sisters of many of the college boys, as well as other high-born dames belonging to New York's aristocracy, who would do a pas seul, or add fancy fantastic toe tripping to their other accomplishments, gain their skill through Miss Becket.There are few ballet mistresses in the country, and none at present having such success as Miss Becket. The teaching of amateurs is the most profitable portion of her work now. It is never possible to learn the names of the fashionable women and society girls whom she is teaching, but they are known to be among the most exclusive women in the city. In the summer Miss Becket usually spends a part of the time at Newport, where the new dances with which fashionable women entertain small and select parties have to be taught to private pupils.It was through this that when one of the college dramatic societies came to give a ballet Miss Becket was secured to train the dozen college boys and as many society girls who were to dance. The performance was a success, and the boys who had taken part were so excited that the following year young students were anxious to dance to have formed two ballet corps of good size. The girls have not had a chance since.For four years these ballets and skit-dancing numbers have been in high favor in college dramatic circles.

All these ballets which have made Yale theatricals famous and drawn overflowing audiences for whatever charity given have been composed by Miss Becket, who always trains the gray student dancers herself. It is all very well for a ballet master to instruct a feminine corps, but it requires a woman to drill young men until they dance with graceful ease. Not only Yale boys but two clubs from Columbia college, Philadelphia boys and Baltimore and Washington students are in the amateur theatrical business for love and charity.
All produce ballets or introduce elaborate dancing, and the poetry of their motion over which the girls rave is gained through Miss Becket, who converts them temporarily into gauzy skirted, blond-wigged beauties and terpsichorean successes.The college season has just closed for the mistress de ballet."I shouldn't mind teaching them all the year round," said Miss Becket, "for they are the nicest pupils there are." Miss Becket served three years' apprentice as a ballet mistress.

"GOING TO GET USED TO MY SKIRTS," HE EXPLAINED.

ticeship at Covent Garden, for she is an English woman. She has been in the ballet at the royal theater which the king maintains in Belgium, has studied in Paris, and for five or six years now has been training in this country. and she declares that for quickness in learning no set of women or professional dancers she has seen can acquire a ballet with the facility of college students. She says it first of all to the perfect shape they are kept in by a reasonable amount of athletics.The Strollers, one of the Columbia college clubs, is one of her favorite clubs to teach. Their ballet of 143 boys that appeared in "Yankee" last season in New York and Philadelphia was the finest college corps of ballet that has yet been trained. Three premieres danced.After all the Yale boys delight the dancing teacher's heart."When the note arrives saying it is time for me to take the ballet in hand I am always delighted. 'Is it funny?' It's the only real pleasure of my year's work. Why absolutely I laugh so much at those boys that I grow fat in the three weeks that I am in New Haven training them before the opening performance. A skeleton would have to laugh at them. They are so full of life.""Do they play tricks on you?"
"No, indeed; they are gentlemen always, and then I make them obey me." The idea of a lot of lanky sons of Eli obeying anybody, much less the notover severe-looking ballet mistress, is laughable."Well, they do what I say. You see they all want a good part. And they don't want to be put in the back row.
So all I have to do when they are too lively or don't attend rehearsals is to say that only the best dancers can go in the quadrilles or front row."Of course, the most of them are green.
Sometimes they dance several years, and then they reach the premiere stage. The managers of the theatricals usually expect to devote three weeks prior to the opening to ballet instruction, and when Miss Becket arrives in New Haven candidates for the ballet are all ready to offer their services. At the first rehearsal the corps is chosen.
Plumpness is an essential qualification in college corps, and the ballet mistress picks out the fattest candidates, those whose shoulders and arms haven't been turned into bunches of muscles and who will most become the decorate and sleeveless satin corsages.The boys have no such preparations to make as girls. Girls always appear at a rehearsal with short skirts, ruffled knickerbockers and dancing corsets. Boys find trousers are not impediments, like girls' long skirts. The boys appear in slippers, such as Dollie and Minnie and Seraphine and Tottie toes about in. They lay aside their coats, roll up their shirt sleeves to show plump arms and dimpled elbows and are ready for work.Miss Becket, in black tights, and two long full Spanish lace skirts, dances before the swaying, bending lines of con-tless students, who try to imitate the grace of the ballet mistress.Rehearsals are held every day, in the hour before dinner usually. The boys hire a hall for this, and it is three weeks of hard work. Premieres have to be taught alone. Everybody is supposed to practice outside of the class.
No such paraphernalia is used as is seen in an ordinary ballet class. No bars are needed to assist the boys to raise their toes. Every one of them is pretty apt to be limber enough to put a toe on a level with his waist or shoulder."It is how to do it so as to be a picture of grace that troubles boys," said Miss Becket. "If a boy thinks he can't do a certain pose, or take certain steps gracefully, he won't have anything to do with it, because they all declare they are not going on to make fools of themselves before their families and friends.""They all try to get into the front row, or in the quadrilles. Although they are all called boys, some of them are nearly thirty, but age has nothing to do with a college boy getting into the back row. A 'boy' may be on the edge of thirty, but if he is the best dancer he may even become a premiere.""It is only at the last two or three rehearsals that the boys appear in their stage costumes. Then the fun commences. 'Oh, Miss Becket, what do you do with this?' 'Oh, Miss Becket, how do you get into these things?'
'How do these corsets go on?' 'How do you fasten this waist?' and such a time as I have. The most ridiculoussignat, I think, I have seen one day when a tall and robust premiere appeared at a rehearsal with his tall hat on, his trousers turned up at the ankles, his ballet shoes on, sleeves pulled up and a full set of gauzy ballet skirts over all. "Going to get used to my skirts," he explained.The Strollers, one of the Columbia
clubs to teach. Their ballet of 143 boys
that appeared in "Yankee" last season
